Generations of visitors to Oxford have delighted in exploring the city’s many fascinating buildings and discovering her treasures for themselves. Some of those not to be missed are:

ASHMOLEAN MUSEUM of Art and Archaeology, the world’s first university museum.

BODLEIAN LIBRARY, the University’s main research library and the one of the oldest libraries in Europe.

BOTANIC GARDEN, one of the most diverse collections of plants in the world, with over 7,000 different types of plant.

COVERED MARKET, opened in 1774, a thriving collection of small traditional food shops, boutiques and gift shops.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY, displaying many of the University’s specimens of entomology, geology, mineralogy and zoology – including the famous Dodo.

PITT RIVERS MUSEUM, containing the University’s archaeological and anthropological collections.

SHELDONIAN THEATRE, ‘one of the architectural jewels of Oxford’, designed by Sir Christopher Wren and used for concerts, lectures and University ceremonies.

For more information and ideas, the Oxford Visitor Information centre on Broad Street is open seven days a week.
