

THE JOHN COLLINS SOCIETY SOCIAL ACTION BURSARIES

The John Collins Society is about creative social engagement with the world. The Revd Canon John Collins (1905-82) was College Chaplain from 1937-48. In 1946, after his return from wartime service, he founded the organisation Christian Action to work for reconciliation with Germany. With his encouragement, Christian Action later became instrumental in drawing British attention to the evils of the apartheid system in South Africa. In 1948, Collins left Oriel to become a Canon at St Paul's Cathedral, where he remained for 33 years. He and his wife Diana were known as passionate campaigners for peace and social justice; he co-founded the charity War on Want in 1951 and the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament in 1958. The John Collins Society was founded from a generous bequest by the late Michael Graham-Jones (Oriel 1939) in his honour.

John Collins Social Action Bursaries

The purpose of this bursary scheme is to encourage Oriel students to engage in some form of project or activity promoting social betterment and public service. The bursaries are open to all current students, undergraduate and postgraduate, without reference to religious background.

The Society proposes to offer two bursaries annually for the sum of no more than £500 each. Priority will be given to those applications that display an innovative or creative approach to questions of social change. While applicants are free to combine a Collins Bursary with other forms of funding (eg. a College travel grant), priority will also be given to those whose proposal is unlikely to secure funding elsewhere. Only applications for future projects will be considered (i.e., no retrospective bursaries will be awarded for completed projects). If the screening committee does not consider any applications submitted to be suitable, then no funds will be dispersed.

All applicants must complete the attached form and provide a statement of purpose of no more than 500 words. Two references are required. The first should be from someone who knows the applicant well and is qualified to assess the applicant's suitability for and commitment to the work proposed. The second should be from the applicant's organising tutor or academic supervisor and must verify the proposed project will not interfere with academic progress.

Finally, all Collins Bursary recipients will be required to provide a brief written report to the organising committee once their project or activity is completed.

Applications must be emailed or submitted by Friday, 22 February 2019.

Notifications will be made by Friday, 8 March 2019.

It is required that Collins Bursary funds are used within one calendar year from the time of award. Conditions for the disbursement of funds will be outlined in the award letter.
